Dear Family & Friends,

BMW, Lexus, Mercedes, Porsche, Cadillac, ...

Driving on campus at Stanford, Curt & I felt a bit out of place in our rented Chevy Impala. But we quickly found a parking spot and began to explore the campus.

We passed groups of students studying in circles on the grass under the California sun. Others sat on picnic tables with laptops and remote controls while a robot roamed nearby. We stopped and read the flyers advertising forums on Kabbalah mysticism, gay rights, and environmental issues. We took a picture in front of the beautiful chapel that today is mostly used for weddings instead of worship.

Stanford is just one of the West Coast universities we are targeting.

As we walked, I considered again the huge task of reaching hundreds of colleges along the Pacific coast, from Washington state in the north to Arizona in the south. I thought of the thousands of future leaders on those campuses that need to hear the Good News of Jesus. It started to seem a bit overwhelming!

I just returned from California and hope to relocate there this July.

But later that same day we attended a fledgling Chi Alpha group at Stanford with two dozen of the brightest college students you could find. Watching them worship Jesus reminded me that the Gospel appeals to all people regardless of intelligence, political views, or wealth. We only have to sow the seeds; the results are up to Jesus.

For the Kingdom on campus,

Kent
